

Adastra

A cutting-edge trimaran, Adastra meaning "to the stars" in Latin, was specially designed for efficiency, stability and performance. Conceptualised in 2012 by leading race yacht builders, McConaghy Yachts, for island adventuring, a shallow draft of 1.2m (3.9ft) means the vessel can explore a wider range of harbours and islands, perfect for the turquoise shallow waters of the Maldives.

A 16m beam offers a cleverly designed and light-filled interior that feels spacious, with spectacular views through the panoramic windows. The foredeck has a large area for sunbathing, and the artfully designed garage door folds out to form a large diving platform.

Below deck, extra space has been created by flaring the central hull directly above the waterline, housing a full-beam master cabin and two guest cabins, as well as crew accommodation.
