As night falls, storm lanterns and twinkling nightlights create a wonderfully romantic atmosphere for you and your guests.

The following information is provided as a guideline for the legal procedure in Thailand and it may be changed by the Thai Government without prior notice. To ensure you obtain the most current information we recommend contacting the Thai Embassy in your home country.

Below are procedures to follow for having your wedding validated by the authorities in Thailand and recognised abroad:

- 1. Issue the certificate letter for bride and groom from the respective embassy of your home country in Thailand (must be in English).
- 2. The certificate letter of the bride and groom issued in the English language by the embassies has to be translated into Thai by any law office in Bangkok.
- 3. The original documents from point one and two must be validated and stamped (on every page) by The Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Bangkok.

Please note: The valid passports of both husband and wife must be shown for steps one, two and three. To complete the process, please allow three working days in Bangkok. It is strongly recommended to make appointments with the authorities in order to have the documents issued on time.

- 4. Once you have arrived in Phuket, the documents will be given to Phuket City Hall prior to the wedding for issuing of the wedding certificate (in Thai). The bride and groom have the option to go to Phuket City Hall to sign the official documents, or ask the authorities to come to the hotel to sign the documents after the wedding ceremony. This will be handled by COMO Point Yamu and is subject to a fee.

Please note that the hotel is not responsible for completing steps one to three. The bride and groom are solely responsible for organising the correct documents. This process is not required if the bride and groom do not need a legal paper certifying their marriage in Thailand.
